Landmark Pinnacle, Docklands

From £425,000

Live in some of the highest apartments in London, work out in the highest private gym and one lucky penthouse owner will have views from the top of the city's highest private terrace. Situated to the west of Canary Wharf, this 75 storey tower has been designed inside and out by architects Squire and Partners. Thought it's packed with 752 studio to three bedroom homes, there's a surprising amount of green space, not least a 'tilting' park entrance and the entire 27th floor, designed as an indoor garden square.

Signal Townhouses, Greenwich

From £850,000

Buy a contemporary, urban townhouse less than a 15 minute commute from work for under £1m. These 16 three bedroom townhouses are within walking distance to North Greenwich station, with Jubilee Line links to Canary Wharf, and Maze Hill, with links to Cannon Street in 15 minutes. Residents will be able to walk to the O2, Greenwich itself and historic Enderby Wharf from the homes in Peninsula West. They're also secured with video entry in a private gated mews with off-street parking.

Elm Park Gardens, Brixton

From £880,000

Two more townhouses also went on sale this week at a small development near buzzy Brixton and its laid-back cousin Herne Hill. Four bedrooms are spread out across three storeys in these houses, which range from 1,243 to 1,370sqft. The kitchen, dining and living room are in the basement, the master bedroom suite and second bedroom on the ground floor and there are two further bedrooms on the third floor. They're also fitted out with parquet flooring, integrated appliances and bathrooms with floor-to-ceiling porcelain tiling.
