NEW KID ON THE BLOCK

New-builds are few and far between in Chiswick, where period properties dominate and residents have campaigned for decades to keep it that way. But new developments are on the rise, and the latest in this trend comes from Radrow, who are in the process of delivering 500 Chiswick High Road – a collection of one-, two- and three-bedroom apartments, plus penthouses and townhouses.

The four-bedroom townhouses, of which there are just five, are sure to pique the interest of families and older couples who want to be near the action (more on this in Cheryl Markosky's article on p6). Large, easy to maintain and a short walk from Chiswick's upmarket amenities, these homes feature open-plan kitchens, generously sized dining and living areas, hotel-style master bedrooms, and two private outdoor spaces.

Townhouse prices start at £2.6 million. Visit www.radrow.co.uk or call 020 3430 6920.

Rising 784 feet above the city, Squire & Partners' Landmark Pinnacle in Canary Wharf will be the tallest residential tower in London and there's little doubt that it'll offer the best views. This vertiginous development will comprise 756 elegantly designed apartments benefiting from 24-hour concierge, as well as a gym, cinema, private roof terrace, arcade and indoor gardens.

Apartments are available from £425,000 and will be on the market with Knight Frank and JLL. Visit www.landmarkpinnacle.co.uk or call 020 3905 6826.
